Getting Your Driver's License

Getting your driver's license is a very big step in your life. It is also important if you plan to get a job because, in many cases, you will have to drive to work. If you are under 18, you may have to sign up for a driver's education course. This course consists of an average of 30 classroom hours, followed by behind-the-wheel instruction. The age when you can get a temporary license varies depending on which state you live in. In most states, there are requirements you have to meet in order to get a temporary license. Be sure to find out what your state regulations are. Your state may require you to have a temporary license for a minimum amount of time before you can get your permanent license.

If reading is difficult for you, check with the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) to see if the temporary license test is available on tape or DVD or if the test questions can be read to you.

Find out the requirements for obtaining a driver's license in your state, and write them below:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________